THE PHOENIX

PUBLISHED BY THE
SENIOR CLASS OF CUMBERLAND
UNIVERSITY

Foreword

IN PREPARING THIS VOLUME OF The Phoenix IT HAS NOT BEEN OUR AIM TO ACCOMPLISH ANYTHING WONDERFUL OR EXTRAORDINARY, BUT IT HAS BEEN OUR SOLE PURPOSE TO REFLECT THE REAL ATMOSPHERE OF CUMBERLAND. EVERY DEPARTMENT OF COLLEGE LIFE HAS BEEN REPRESENTED TO THE VERY BEST OF OUR ABILITY. AS TO HOW WELL WE HAVE SUCCEEDED, YOU ARE THE JUDGE. WE HAVE DONE OUR BEST; NONE CAN DO MORE.

DEDICATION

WE, THE CLASS OF NINETEEN HUNDRED TWENTY-ONE DEDICATE THIS VOLUME OF

TO

OF

THE DEPARTMENT OF LAW

WHOSE LOFTY IDEALS AND NOBLE AIMS HAVE SERVED AS AN INSPIRATION TO THE CLASS OF NINETEEN HUNDRED TWENTY-ONE, ALONG WITH MANY OTHER CLASSES THAT REVERE AND HONOR THEIR ALMA MATER, CUMBER-
LAND UNIVERSITY.

JUDGE NATHAN GREEN

Judge Nathan Green was not only one of Tennessee's most notable men—he was one of the most remarkable men of his time. It is not an unheard-of thing for a man to live to be ninety-two years of age, but one who continues active work when he has passed four-score and ten has been rare since the days of the Hebrew patriarchs. Judge Green taught his law class on the day of his death. His life covered a period from 1827 to 1919. Many of the world's important events were embraced in the period in which he lived. His is a place of distinction in the annals of Tennessee. Judge Green was endeared not only to his immediate friends, but to many throughout the country who have felt the obligation of his valuable and painstaking tutelage in their early lives.

DR. ANDREW B. MARTIN

Dr. Andrew B. Martin was born and reared in Smith County, Tenn. He moved to Lebanon, Tenn., when a young man. He was educated in the schools of Lebanon, graduating from Cumberland University with the LL.B. degree in 1858. He served with distinction in the Civil War. After the war ended he practiced law in Lebanon, Tenn., for a number of years. He served as a professor of law in Cumberland University from 1878 to 1920. For almost half a century Dr. Martin gave his talents and energy to the development of the Law Department of Cumberland. Through the untiring efforts of Dr. Martin and Judge Green the Law School of Cumberland University was developed to a high degree of efficiency. One has but to scan the list of the alumni to find many of the country's leading men that are the product of the Law Department of Cumberland University.

ANDREW B. BUCHANAN, A.B., D.D.
Vice-President Cumberland University
President (Ibid) Ad Interim

Dr. Buchanan was born in Lebanon, Tenn., December 14, 1861. Graduated from Cumberland University, A.B. degree, 1879, received degree of Doctor of Divinity from same institution. Pastor of Presbyterian churches in Fort Worth and Houston, Texas. He was for one year associated with Col. L. L. Rice in the management of Castle Heights Military Academy, Lebanon, Tenn. Dr. Buchanan comes to his new position ripe in experience and scholarship and is eminently qualified to represent Cumberland University throughout the South and the country at large. Cumberland University is to be congratulated on securing the services of Dr. Buchanan. Under his wise direction Cumberland will make marked progress and will accomplish a great work in the field of Christian education. The trustees, alumni and students have abiding faith and confidence in Dr. Buchanan, and realize that the famous old institution that has produced so many illustrious men in the past will continue to fill its place in the training of the young manhood and womanhood of the country.

Class History

IN the fall of '17 our class had its beginning. There were sixteen of us freshmen, and we well deserved the name which we bore, for we were quite "fresh" and "green." It is interesting to notice that of this sixteen only four are in the Senior Class. We were very glad to receive a new member into our Senior Class, which increases our number to five. Three members of our Freshman Class are seniors at other universities, the other nine have fallen by the way-side. All of which goes to prove that to reach the point of being a senior is clearly a test of the survival of the fittest; those who have no "sand" and "grit" can never reach this blissful state; they fall out long ere this point is attained.

As sophomores we felt quite exalted and overly wise. The "greenness" and "freshness" of the previous year had begun to wear off somewhat, and we were seeing new visions and dreaming new dreams. The suddenness of this change caused us to feel a little "puffed up," and we often felt it our duty even to instruct the members of the faculty.

Our junior year was a period of "lopping off." The folly of the previous year began to dawn upon us, and we began to rid ourselves of the bad habits and wrong impressions which we formed during the sophomore year. We can still hear Professor Drane saying to the members of his classes: "It is just as important that you learn that you don't know some things as it is to learn that you do know other things." It was in the junior year that the thought first dawned upon us that there were some things that we didn't know, so in view of this wonderful discovery, we began to apply ourselves to our studies, and this resulted in wonderful progress.

We are now seniors, and what a marvelous transformation four years of college life has brought about. We feel the great responsibilities that rest upon our shoulders as we go out into the world, and whatever success we may attain, to our Alma Mater, with its splendid and well-learned faculty, shall be ascribed much of the honor and glory.

Historical Sketch of Class of 1920

IN the summer of 1920 plans were completed by ninety-one men from different parts of Uncle Sam's dominions for obtaining the degree of LL.B. For many weeks and months these men studied the catalogs of different schools and the inducements of each. Finally, after comparing honor rolls, costs, course of study, and all other things that make a school, they decided that the Lebanon Law School was the proper place to attend.

September 8 was registration day. Each fellow went about the necessary preparations with so much enthusiasm that by night on that day all necessary preparations were made for work.

On September 9 the opening services were conducted at Caruthers Hall. Judges Beard and Chambers both made able addresses, followed by a few short talks by some of the prominent citizens of the town. Then assignments were made for the next day.

The first recitation was held on the morning of the 10th. It was not a perfect one, of course, because each fellow was studying his new surroundings more than he was his books.

On September 20 a reception was given by the town in the Y. M. C. A. hall at the dormitory. For the first time the ice of social entrance was really broken, and the embryo lawyers from that time made themselves at home in Lebanon.

Things now ran smoothly until a few weeks before the national election on November 2. Then the Republicans and Democrats of the school began to treat each other as jealous lovers. Warm discussions became as frequent as meals. Messrs. Tolbert, Riggs and Biggs were finally recognized as the leaders of the Republicans. Messrs. Walton, McClendon, Kensinger and Jones were the recognized leaders of the Democrats. Each party formed their clubs. The Democratic Club elected Mr. C. E. Kensinger president. Mr. J. A. Tolbert was elected president of the Republican Club. No one fought, but on the morning of November 3 the Democrats were silent and gloomy, the Republicans silently joyful. The fight was over, the climax passed.

But this political fight brought out the fact that W. O. Walton was to succeed Henry W. Grady as the South's idol, that Mr. McClendon was to be a factor in national democracy, that Mr. Jones would some day be the Patrick Henry of the West. It proved also that Mr. Tolbert was the future Abe Lincoln of the U. S., and that Messrs. Riggs and Biggs would some day give the Democrats trouble in Tennessee. The fight proved clearly that there were reserved seats in Congress for both factions of the class and that they would some day have another chance of friendly combat in the capitol of the nation.

The class did not complete their organization as juniors until November 15. At this time there were no hard fights for class honors, but none of the officers elected could boast of any large majority. Mr. Burke was elected president by a majority of two votes over Mr. Ivy. Mr. Dalbey was elected vice-president, Mrs. McCouan was elected secretary, Miss Packer, treasurer. With these officers the Junior Class continued its career.

The students now stormed the works of Blackstone, Kent, Greenleaf, Story and others, bravely, until the spirit of Christmas began to fill the air. Then visions of home, mother, sweethearts and friends sitting around tables loaded for the Christmas feasts began to come to each member of the class. On December 4 the homeward bound were led by Mr. Bond, and by December 22 there were only twelve or fifteen left to hear Judges

The Phoenix, Nineteen Twenty-One

Beard and Chambers expound the law. On December 23 school closed until January 3.

By January 3 all but five were back for work. Each person reported a good time at home. By January 10 school was again in full sway.

On January 20 the Senior Class graduated. All the juniors attended the commencement exercises. Judge Gardenhire's address was the feature of the evening. The class made a splendid appearance. Within three days after graduation all of the seniors had gone to their respective homes to assume their responsibilities as leaders in society and champions of the law. They had disappeared to mingle in the sea of humanity and to champion the nation's welfare. The juniors missed them keenly. No more would they hear the addresses of Judge Buback before the Bolshevik Club. No more, until they meet again in more renowned halls, would they enjoy the associations of these departed friends.

On January 20 the juniors became seniors. The class election was held January 26. Here was more fighting. For weeks the two sides had been campaigning for their respective candidates. Each had sworn that they would elect the officers from their crowd. Each side made out their slate. Mr. W. O. Walton was recognized leader of one side. Mr. Howard was the leader of the other. When the time for nominations came that morning, Mr. Finch in a well-worded speech nominated Mr. Walton. Mr. Lewis then nominated Mr. Howard in a speech of no small eloquence. Nominations for vice-president, secretary, treasurer, orator, prophet, poet and historian then followed. When voting began each student's nerves were tense from excitement. When the final count was made at 10:30 a. m. it was shown that Mr. Howard had won by a majority of two votes over Mr. Walton. Mr. Walton's supporters wept, Mr. Howard's supporters tore off the ceiling, plaster and shingles with their hilarious demonstrations. When all the votes were counted Mr. Snodgrass was declared vice-president, Mr. Sperry, secretary; Mr. McClendon, prophet; Mr. Pierce, poet; Mr. Hill, historian; Mr. Johnson, treasurer; Mr. Tolbert, orator. With this corps of officers the Senior Class began their career. Work was now the chief feature of class activities.

The graduating exercises were held at Caruthers Hall on the night of June 1. It was an historic occasion in the history of Lebanon, and a landmark in the life of each student. There were no factions now. The fighting spirit had gone. Each student shook hands with his classmates and bade goodbye in assumed cheerfulness.

When the trains pulled out of Lebanon on June 2 most of the students were at the depot and also their many friends in Lebanon. Such exclamations as "So long, boys"; "Goodbye, girls"; "See you in Washington"; "Meet you in the U. S. senate," etc., were heard from each coach.

But those days are gone now. The expectations of the students, however, are being realized. You can now see the names of the students in the great daily papers of the nation. Many of their dreams have come true. And as they look over the pages of this annual a flood of tender memories comes to the mind of each student, and many silent thoughts arise as they turn from cover to cover.

Class Prophecy

"When I dipt into the future far as human eye could see, Saw the vision of the world and all the wonder that would be."—Tennyson.

SI undertake to picture the future of the Senior Class of 1921 I think I realize full well what a stupendous task it is. I have evoked the same far-seeing spirit that guided the seers of old, and at last in some indescribable and most mysterious manner, I have caught a vision of the future of the Class of 1921, which is related to the reader only for what he may deem it worth.

It seems that I was living in the year 1940, and pursuant to the advice of my physician, was on a trip for my health. The journey started at Jackson, Miss. The first stop of importance was at Little Rock, Ark., where I was the guest of W. J. Irvin, my old roommate at C. U. He had been elected governor of his state and was wearing the honor very gracefully indeed. Of course we talked of the old days at Lebanon when we labored together on "Fourth Kent" and Story's Equity Jurisprudence. I asked him to tell me about the other "Arkansas Travelers," and he stated that C. O. Hill was speaker of the state senate, in which position he had been instrumental in putting some very important laws on the statute books. E. L. Hollaway was a very prominent lawyer at El Dorado, where he had amassed a great fortune in oil suits.

My next sojourn was to Tulsa, Okla. On the train I met up with Jimmy Standford, who was on his way to Tulsa to look after some oil interests for a client. I learned from the conversation that he had made a very phenomenal success in the practice of law in Texas and Oklahoma. As we rode together he told me of the success of all of the men from the Lone Star State. Some had entered politics, and some were making a living by "the aforesaid and the same" method. J. V. Allred had served one term in congress and was a candidate for re-election. H. B. Hartgrave, A. C. Buckner, C. W. Voorheis and R. E. Baird were members of the state legislature. W. A. Koons and R. E. Phillips were district attorneys. E. W. Turner, O. H. Studer, C. H. Sperry, S. P. Presswood, Van Anderson, E. S. Bond, Xaxier Christ, M. C. Douglas, Floyd Enlow, S. S. Gaines, J. E. Kuteman and A. A. Ledbetter were all enjoying a very lucrative practice at the bar of justice.

While in Tulsa I visited the law firm of Crossland & Crossland, where a very interesting conversation was enjoyed with Sam and Hess. They recited to me the records of the Oklahoma men as fluently as if they had memorized them for a set speech. "First," said they, "of course, you know that J. H. Raines has risen to national prominence in the Democratic Party, for he is now chairman of the national committee. There is no doubt but that his ability to organize and direct the affairs of a party will cause him to dictate the policy of his party for years to come; even though he be opposed in the conventions by Tammany Hall. C. T. Bennett is circuit judge in his district, and according to reports is meting out justice to saint and sinner in a very becoming manner. Mrs. Pearl McKeowen is presiding in queenly beauty over the home of Dr. H. A. McKeowen. She has never practiced law, but is an honorary member of the State Bar Association. M. B. Johnson is in the state senate. C. J. Moody, N. B. Johnson, G. W. Satterfield and Gene Redd are prominent lawyers in different parts of the state, and all of them are ornaments to their profession."

From Tulsa I went to Memphis, Tenn., to attend the Tri-State Fair. On arriving there, I discovered in glancing over the Commercial Appeal, that a reunion of the Tennessee men of the Class of 1921 of C. U. was to be held in the banquet rooms of the Chisca Hotel at 8:30 that evening. Of course I took this opportunity of seeing some of the old boys. Every Tennessee man was present. The master of ceremonies was our efficient president, Peabody Howard. He was president of the L. & N. Railroad, in which position of trust and honor he had greatly improved the efficiency and service of that road. The meeting was a genuine jollyfication; an occasion of much oratory and humor. As the reminiscences of the days spent at Lebanon poured forth from the lips of the toasters one could not help feeling himself back in that Mecca of legal learning. My limited space prevents my giving a complete write-up of this occasion; hence I shall give only the position in life each man occupied as I learned it that evening. J. W. Van Dyke was making the "Old Volunteer" State a very pleasing governor. W. F. Barry and J. L. Snodgrass were judges on the Supreme Court bench. W. E. Donighy, D. L. Lansden, E. G. Tollett, W. D. Pogue and S. P. Raulston were or had been at some time circuit judges in their respective districts. B. Pope was state attorney-general. R. H. Porter and Henry Goodpasture were attorneys-general. O. V. Chesbro, D. Lewis, Bruce Ivy, C. L. Hensley, R. C. Burks, M. H. Biggs and J. L. Wolf were in the state legislature, and of course doing honor to their constituents. W. M. Gibbs, J. A. Driver, J. L. Driscoll, W. B. Allen, J. F. Morrison, William McClenahan, E. F. McClure, J. H. Noland, O. Osborn, G. J. Pierce, J. R. Rink, J. A. Smith, G. W. Smith, M. T. Thomas and C. S. Tollett had all made such flattering successes in the legal profession that their friends had been unable to get them to try their luck in the political field.

Before the parting words were said the master of ceremonies called on the writer of this article to give a report of the men in the "Magnolia State." The following statement was made: "J. V. Gipson has been promoted by his constituents from the lower to the upper house of the state legislature, where he has been the author of a good many constructive laws. G. H. Murphy is circuit judge in his district. J. R. Gibson and J. S. Fiach are members of the house of representatives. H. K. Mahon, Jr., and P. C. Hale are lawyers of recognized ability in North Mississippi. At the close of these few remarks Peabody Howard suggested that a vote of thanks be extended for them."

I next visited our national capitol. In the senate chamber I heard a debate equal to the famous Lincoln-Douglas or the celebrated Webster-Hayne debate; championed on the Democratic side by Will O. Walton of Alabama and Mrs. Granella Packer ——— of Florida. On the Republican side by J. A. Tolbert of South Carolina and E. S. Dalby of Ohio. In the Supreme Court room I had the pleasure of hearing a very able opinion rendered by Chief Justice A. Barry.

Before my visits were complete I had gotten information about every man in the class. The following men were practicing law, and successfully, too: A. W. Nichols, K. Peterson, T. B. Rapkoch, Dr. M. E. Rives, H. E. Evans, H. M. Fields, O. A. Green and D. B. Kahn. W. C. Goad had made a great success at law and had left the profession for a while to arouse public sentiment on several great reforms and because of his oratorical ability had become very prominent nationally. R. B. Giles was in his state senate. W. E. Griffith, A. H. Hinman and E. C. Kensinger were district attorneys in their states. C. J. Kane was a lawyer of great ability in Canada. Quinton Yumul had spent most of his life in working for political independence of the Philippines and at last his efforts had been crowned with success. Anna Boyer had given most of her time to persuading the different states to improve the hospitals for the unfortunate. Mrs. Fields was making her husband an excellent partner in law as well as a companion for life. T. D. Mason was chairman of the Democratic Committee of Maryland.

From Washington I turned my face homeward, refreshed and inspired from the pleasant experiences, and resolved that I, too, would accomplish something before my life was entirely spent.

PROPHET.

THE VITALITY OF IDEALS

IDEALS are fundamental essentials. Every individual race and nation since the dawn of creation has had some ideal. The ideal of the prehistoric man was entirely different from that of a later period. Kingdoms, principalities, and empires have risen, flourished for a time and faded away. Many of the nations of antiquity are no more. Their passing from the arena of life was largely due to the ideal they cherished. Physical force was for untold centuries the supreme law of man. For ten long centuries a pall of darkness covered the continent of Europe. Finally a beam of light was seen through the impending gloom, and man was lifted from his lowly state. At last a clarion call was heard, "Awake thou that sleepest." The hills took up the sound and echoed it on, and on it echoes still.

Could man made in the image of his Creator, and commanded by that Creator to go forth and subdue the earth, grope in darkness forever? Would he through all the years groan in chains of slavery? Justice from her throne answered no. Despairing of success in a land so fettered by ignorance and greed, a small band of determined men and women inspired with the ideal of patriotism, liberty, and independence, set sail. Leaving their homes, their loved ones and all that was dear to them save the immortal ideal of independence, they turned their faces toward the land of America. In that land beyond the Atlantic the founders of our government established the foundations of the greatest and grandest republic the world has ever known. The iron hand of tyranny followed. Once established in their new home, they declared themselves free and independent. War followed, and the conflict will forever stand as the most glorious in the annals of time. The custodians of liberty swept back and forever wiped tyranny from the American soil, and today millions are blessed.

Looking back through a brief span of decades we see a few struggling settlements, sparsely peopled, clinging to the Atlantic seaboard, hemmed in by the Spaniard, the French, and savage Indian tribes, grow into thirteen colonies, throw off the dominion of a foreign king, and as united republics achieve their independence. We have seen these states found a system of government with constitutional guarantees and limitations guarded by an independent judiciary become in a brief period the marvel of all time. The fathers of our country established once and forever the cardinal principle of independence, freedom and equality of opportunity. From the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers on the far flung shores of New England, down to the present time, liberty and independence have been supreme. The American ideal has ever been, and will always be, that of justice, independence and equality. It takes service and sacrifice to maintain ideals. They can be maintained in no other manner.

With a small beginning in the western world the ideal of freedom and independence has progressed until it is now the world ideal. All honor to the founders of our nation. In their breast throbbed the true spirit of independence and equality under the law. The statesmen who framed the Constitution of the United States and provided thereby for the government under which we now live, avoided those errors which had caused the downfall of ancient republics. Our system of three distinct departments—Legislative, Executive, and Judicial—paved the way for the best system of representative government that any nation has yet established.

The republics of the middle ages manifested an innate tendency to become either a weak, unbridled mobocracy or a petty kingdom of tyrants. England furnished an example of the variations of power; the change from the rule of an aristocracy to a concentration of power in the king, ignoring the lords and the people. Our revolutionary statesmen studied the Swiss Republic, and drew as much wisdom as possible from those early attempts at just government. Our government is founded primarily on the free consent of the people.

The Phoenix, Nineteen Twenty-One

Representative government, that form in which every individual has a voice in his country's government, is the foundation of the American ideal. Despotism, bureaucracy and autocracy were forever swept away when our system of Constitutional Government was established. The ideal of liberty, independence and equality that prompted the founding of the United States of America still survives. No star announced the birth of our republic, save the ever-gleaming and never-fading light of liberty. In the light of recent events the faith of our fathers has been jolted severely, but the spirit still survives. "Faith of our fathers, living faith, we will be true to thee till death."

America has ever been the synonym for the loftiest, noblest and best in life. "Columbia, the gem of the ocean," has ridden through many storms. Through the guidance of an all wise Providence she will weather the storm through which she is passing, and anchor safely in the haven of rest. Before we launch out in a visionary crusade presumably intended to benefit unappreciative millions, let us keep the home fires of liberty, independence and freedom burning.

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead
Who never to himself hath said,
This is my own, my native land?
If such there breathe go mark him well,
For him no minstrel raptures swell,
High though his title, proud his name,
Boundless his wealth as wish can claim,
Living he shall forfeit fair renown,
And doubly dying shall go down
To the vile earth from which he sprung,
'Unwept, unhonored, and unsung.'"

In this day of internal strife and dissension let us remember the stirring words of the immortal Lincoln, that "Government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth." This fundamental factor of the American creed should be adhered to more than any other in this the wake of the Twentieth Century, when radicalism is running rampant throughout the length and breadth of our country. When the bolshevist plots the destruction of our government; when socialistic tendencies are rife in the land, let us turn to the source of all our strength and pledge our faith, our fealty, and our all to the task of preserving intact and transmitting to posterity the American ideal of liberty under the law. In a land of equal freedom the only sovereign power known is that of the supreme law of the land. Supremacy of the law, and rendering justice—these are the two great commandants of the gospel of civil liberty.

"Call it the selfishness of nationality if you will; I think it an inspiration to patriotic devotion to safeguard America first; to think of America first; to exalt America first; to love for and revere America first. Let the internationalist dream and the bolshevist destroy. Let us dedicate ourselves to the task of preserving for all time the American ideal. In the spirit of the republic we proclaim Americanism, and acclaim America."

Sail on, O union, strong and great,
Sail on, O union strong and great,
Humanity, with all its fears,
With all the hopes of future years,
Is hanging breathless on thy fate."

JOSEPH A. TOLBERT, Orator Senior Law Class, 1921.

Junior Law Class History

THE Junior Law Class of Cumberland University came into being on Monday, January 24, in the year of our Lord 1921. Its constituent elements were gathered from a wide range of territory; from Arizona, New Mexico and Wyoming on the west, to the Atlantic on the east; from the shores of Lake Erie on the north, to the southernmost part of Florida.

From this wide diversity of localities it would at first appear that there would be a wide diversity of ideas, ideals and ambitions. In the history of this institution—the oldest, most highly respected of its kind in the land—no class has ever shown itself more clearly united in ideas, ideals and the purpose to so prepare, that as individuals each might more capably serve his country and his fellowman. Contrary to the precedent established the past few years, no state predominates in numbers—and as to any state's predominating in quality of her offerings to the class, the writer deems it prudent to withhold judgment.

Undismayed by the statements of the seniors as to the rigors of the course of study, the work was entered into with a vim that showed the definiteness of purpose of every man. The social side of the school was entered into just as heartily, and the writer feels that he is conservative in saying that this class has more members, proportionately, affiliated with the various fraternity chapters here than any class in the history of Cumberland University.

Class officers were elected at a mixed social and business meeting on February 28. This was the only exclusive Junior Class function of the year, the intensive work required by the course of study not permitting the loss of a single evening from the reading table.

The class furnished the university the foundation for its gridiron hopes for the coming year. Richard W. Johnson is a man of broad experience in football, having played with the Carlisle Indians two seasons, later serving as coach on college teams in Oklahoma. We also furnished the varsity nine its utility man, Camplin, who has shown marked ability in the box, on short and at the bat. In the grandest game of all, Love, we permit to assume the floor Oliver S. Huser of Oklahoma, whose ability to captivate the fair sex is only overshadowed by his ability to as dexterously withdraw from the lists of the fair one when another claims his attention. Mention is made of these as outstanding in their peculiar realm of endeavor, and no slight is intended to those others whose particular field is not so prominent in the school life.

With the utmost respect and love for those learned men at whose fountain of knowledge we drink, and regard for our upperclassmen who have always willingly lent a helping hand whenever we asked, the Junior Class of 1921 bespeaks for Cumberland University the success she so richly deserves.

Of the twoscore apparently aspiring freshmen who entered Cumberland in September, 1918, hardly half a score remain to bear the noble standard of scholarship to victory in 1922.

However, the purging virtues of scholastic training serve a praiseworthy purpose in eliminating the dross, that the purified precious metal may shine in undimmed splendor, dispensing to the world its inestimable value in perpetuating all that is good.

The personnel of the class is unique in that all departments of the college, as well as all student activities are represented. Our co-eds are unsurpassed in the culinary art, as all our boys will attest in good faith. Our class is represented by some of the best athletes on all the teams. And to add to the artistic elements of the school we have some of the most gifted artists of the piano, violin, voice and reading to be found anywhere. We are also adequately represented in the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. and have a member of the Student Volunteer Band.

As to scientific and literary research, we are not in default of a mathematician and a daring chemical experimenter, also a modern language shark, and numerous adept students of the social sciences.

A large per cent of the literary society officials and leaders are chosen from our class. In a word, when a person of proficiency and ability is desired to take the lead in any phase of college activity a JUNIOR is chosen.

We have met and successfully mastered every proposition that has presented itself. "Let us not be weary in well-doing, so that in due season we may receive our reward."

Juniors, let us not falter in our endeavor to reach the much-desired goal of 1922, our Eldorado, but finish the homestretch with unabated zeal, and say with Pœ:

"Over the mountains
Of the moon,
Down the valley of the Shadow
Ride, boldly ride."
The shade replied:
"If you seek for Eldorado."

"Is that your class poem," do I hear you say?
All I know is, call it what you may,
For other tasks I have I cannot delay.
Juniors, Juniors, steady ever be
That your graduation day may see.

Sophomore Class History

The Sophomore Class of 1921 consists of fifteen members. Twelve out of the fifteen entered the university last year as freshmen, and, having victoriously faced all problems confronting a freshman, make up the greater part of our Sophomore Class this year. The other three members, realizing what a fine institution Cumberland is, came here from other parts.

This Sophomore Class is in many respects the best Cumberland has had in many years, and is the best class in school this year, not excepting those dignified seniors. In our midst we have representatives in every organization in the university. We have football, basketball and baseball players, Y. M. C. A. workers, musicians and other talented students. And then our class has the honor of claiming some of the most diligent students in school, the kind who believe that the more work they put in now, the more good they will get out of life later. To this fact any of our beloved teachers will attest. It is on account of the work that the class as a whole has done that we prophesy a record-breaking Junior Class for next year.

Indeed, after having been a member of this wonderful Sophomore Class of 1921, and with our hearts set on work we can see only the bright side of life, and remembering always "Attempt not, or accomplish thoroughly," we shall try to do honor to the name of Cumberland.

Class History and Prophecy

The Freshman Class was organized completely in January, 1921. Our class roll consists of thirty-six names, four of whom are ministerial students, two pre-medical students, five student volunteers, and the remainder of them are pursuing the courses leading to the degrees, A.B., B.S. In January two of our class were taken from us as they received their matrimonial degrees. This class is one of the largest freshman classes that Cumberland has had for a good many years. We have varied talent in this class in which we find a scientific wrestler, boxers, basketball, football and baseball players, orators, violinists, soloists, ministers, artists, poets, mathematicians, a trained nurse, comedians, jazz hounds and every other conceivable thing. We have successful representation in every organization in the university. We were represented in basketball and football. Our most notable achievement was the winning of the interclass championship in basketball from the sophomores. We freshmen have placed our aims in life very high, and realizing there is a hard road to travel, we will still trod ever onward until we reach our goal. We realize that our many failures are only stepping stones to success. The Freshman Class of this year is the best enjoyed by the university for many years. With such fixed purposes in the minds and hearts of us, and the opportunities afforded us, we may safely prophesy a great future for our class.

Class of 1921

CUMBERLAND PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT

THE Class of 1921 is great in spirit, in achievement, and in character.

This class is composed of the following members: Anna Murphy, Ruth Lea, Anna Gray Cook, Marie Thompson, Katherine Bryan, Alice Fisher Stratton, Anne Harrison, Frances Grigsby, Mildred Prewett, Jean Moore, Edna Watson, Richard Brown, Weldon Dinwiddie, Reese Macy, Harry Macy, George Evertson, Elvis Evans, Walter Robins, Addison Barry, Joe Anderson Wier, Harry Steele, Leonard Fisher, Marcus McAllen, James McFarland.

It is the boast of this class that it has not forfeited a senior privilege this year. We have had a happy year, but no short cuts nor easy roads: to receive a diploma from our school one must do four years' work of the standard required in the best schools of our nation. It requires hard work to claim Cumberland Preparatory as our Alma Mater, but we believe our faculty will bear us out in saying there has not been a quitter in our class and the more difficult the work the firmer the resolution to do it and do it well.

A new era of advance has been begun this year in our school and our principal has looked to our Senior Class for worthy student leadership. Her courage, determination and sympathy have helped us succeed and in turn our loyalty and success have helped to make for Cumberland Prep the greatest year in its history.

Do not think, dear friends, that as a humble member of the above class I am a boaster. I am only stating facts about the great Class of 1921.

The Phoenix, Nineteen Twenty-One

Cumberland University Preparatory School

HE Preparatory Department of Cumberland University has grown in size, in spirit and in efficiency during the present year.

With a faculty every member of which is a university graduate, a faculty which puts emphasis on scholarship and insists on high attainments, that it may reach the highest goal in character moulding, Cumberland Prep yields first place to no other school in the preparation of her pupils for college or for life. Whatever conduces to character formation in the class room, on the athletic field, in confidential talks between members of the faculty and the student body, is stressed. This school is strictly religious in principle and character.

Well-equipped laboratories and library, splendid class rooms, comfortable dormitories, adequately furnished gymnasiums make it possible for ideal work to be carried out.

This is an accredited school and offers great affiliation advantages: here you can be prepared for any college in the United States. A diploma from a school of this character is a great asset for a boy or girl. Someone has aptly said that a diploma from a standard American school is like the hallmark on sterling silverware—it does not make it any better silver, but it does stamp it as of certain quality and fineness; or like the stamp of the mint on the $20 goldpiece—it does not make it any purer gold, but it does tell the world what it is.

If a boy or girl is going to college, a diploma from Cumberland Prep will not only give him a pass into college, but will prepare him in such a way that he will be stamped with a certain quality and fineness after he has entered; or if he goes into business life he will find it distinctly an asset.

Public Speaking Department

Under the instruction of Miss Sara Fakes, a graduate of Curry School of Boston, the Public Speaking Department of Cumberland University has shown great progress during the year.

"A Midsummer Night's Dream," "The Romancers," and a number of short plays and sketches and occasional readings in chapel from the department have proven a source of pleasure to the student body.

With about thirty members, one senior in the class, we consider ourselves a number one class.

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

Football

- LOGAN End
Weight 150. This was "Doug's" second year at the wing. When it comes to snarin' passes, there's none better than he—fast is his middle name. He was a power on defense, breaking up interference, and going down after punts.
- DINWIDDIE Tackle
Weight 215. This young giant (6 feet 4 inches) had a habit of tearing through the line and breaking up plays before the backfield got started. "Big Dinny" is going to be with us for several seasons yet.
- WALLACE Guard
Weight 175. "Hot Rock" never said very much, but O boy, listen: He's a hard tackler and is there fighting all the time. He "showed his stuff" in the first game of the season with S. P. U. He'll be back next year.
- CAWTHON Center
Weight 165. "Cotton" is another of those "tight as a clam" chaps. His steady, consistent passing saved many a fumble, and was a big factor in the efficient work of the backfield. We hope to have him back next year.
- BOND, Captain Guard
Weight 260. "Heavy" hails from Texas, where he learned to hit 'em hard and treat 'em rough. He was exceptionally fast for his weight and opened up a hole every time he moved, and whenever he stopped, the opposition stopped too. The efficient work of the line can be attributed to his coaching.
- NICHOLS Tackle
Weight 170. Too much cannot be said of the fast work of this hard-tackling, hard-working Kentucky boy. "Nick" got his collarbone broken in the last minute of play of the last game of the season, and that didn't seem to affect his "gameness."
- STANFORD End
Weight 150. "Jimmie" and "Doug" made the fastest set of ends in this part of the state. "Jimmie" had a "sweet" way of being back where the ball was before the opposite backfield ever started to run, and never failed to down his man.
- NOLAN Quarterback
Weight 145. Sweeping end runs, high dives over the line, passes straight and true, and some mighty boots—that sums up Joe's work. His hobby is football, and the Michigan "eleven" is his goal for next year.

The Phoenix, Nineteen Twenty-One

- STUDER Halfback
Weight 190. It's hard to tell where "Dutch" showed up best; he circled ends and tore up the line at will, and when he hit a man—they usually called for time. He could snatch a forward pass out of the air anywhere.
- JOHNSON Fullback
Weight 165. "Chief Sau-soo Wahoo" showed up among the best in all branches of the game, and lived up to the traditions of his people; in cunning, speed and pluck. He is a brother of the new coach.
- MCCLURE Halfback
Weight 170. "Fightin' Mac" was easily the best of the backfield, and was always alert and quick to act. His name tells more about his all-around qualities than we can tell in words.
- ALLRED Halfback
Weight 158. Out with the "pep" and determination common among men of the "Lone Star" State, Jimmy was particularly adapted to his position. He had an educated toe, speed and nerve. Due to a fractured hand sustained early in the season, both he and the team were greatly handicapped throughout several games.
- BURKS Tackle
Weight 150. "R. C." was a bit diminutive in appearance for line work, but always delivered the goods, both on offense and defense.
- DONAGHY Quarterback
Weight 150. "Bill" was "stove up" the greater part of the season, but was there with the head work. He's an old Ohio all-state man.
- WILLIAMS Quarterback
Weight 140. This was "Willie's" first year, but he made good at both quarter and end. His passing and speed made him look mighty sweet for the skipper job next year.
- MOODY Guard
Weight 170. Speed and hard-hitting characterize "Dwight L.'s" line work. We believe he belongs in the same tribe as "Chief."
- MCCALLON End
Weight 170. "Mac" was sure there in spirit, and we predict that he will be a big help next year.
- FOSTER Backfield
Weight 165. "Dewey" looked mighty good to us, although he didn't get started till late.
- HALE
"P. C." came out with the spirit, but heart trouble, which later caused an operation, forced him to remain in the background.

University Basketball

Centers BARRY (Captain), FOSTER (Manager)
Guards STANFORD, MOODY, STUDER AND McCALLON
Forwards LOGAN, DRISCOLL, KIRBY AND WALLACE

The basketball team was unable to secure a full schedule, due to being delayed by unforeseen events. Then Studer caused more trouble by allowing a cow nag to throw him and break his leg. This little folly on the part of Studer caused the team to be very much handicapped. However, the boys did good work and had the satisfaction of causing three of C. U.'s age-old rivals to sweat blood during their several encounters. The most important games played were with Middle Tennessee Normal at Murfreesboro, University of Chattanooga at Chattanooga, and Bryson College at Fayetteville.

Prep Basketball

Forwards McCLAIN (Captain) AND R. MACEY (Manager)
 Center DINWIDDIE
 Guards H. MACEY AND ELAM
 Substitutes SIMS, MARTIN AND BARRY

The Prep basketball team got a good start, a good schedule, and good material, and under the excellent coaching of Mr. Belcher were able to bring many scalps home and make all basketball fans proud of C. U.'s coming stars. Ten games were played and our warriors won six by a large majority. McClain was sick during two of the games and the handicap caused by the absence of their leader resulted in the team losing those games; namely, Chapel Hill and Peoples-Tucker. These men all intend to be back next year and the writer predicts that the coming year will find C. U. with a team able to meet all comers without even the probability of a single defeat.

Baseball

UT on Cumberland field these afternoons between 3:00 and sunset one may witness the making of what is proving to be the best team seen on the local field in many years. Many of the men are already veterans of the game and the team as a whole is acquiring the requisite teamwork for a successful season. The many aspirants have now dwindled down to twenty men and new uniforms have been issued to twelve of them. Behind the bat we have McClure and Lansden. Both are showing real class. McClure is a veteran of both college and army baseball. Lansden also showed his stuff while in Uncle Sam's service.

In the box is McNabb, a veteran of last season and a twirler worthy of note; Fields, with several years' experience in college baseball; Camplin, from Wyoming, who is also an exceptionally good utility man; Mahon, a southpaw from ole Mississippi; and Joe Nolan, who has had several seasons on local nines.

Allen has and needs no competition on the first bag. He is also handy with the stick.

The keystone position is being contested for by Lewis and Smith of East and West Tennessee, respectively, with just a shade or two in favor of the former.

On the hot corner Moore from Centre College, Kentucky, is stripped lightning.

Swiftness again comes into vogue as little Enlow from Texas scoops 'em up at short. Finley, a local boy, who won his letter at T. P. I., is a close second.

Four good men are competing for the outfield. "Doug" Logan of last year's varsity is hard pushed by McClanahan for right field. Phillips and Tollet are contestants for the left garden. Phillips is a heavy hitter and also guards his position like a sentinel in no-man's land within one minute of the zero hour. He lets mighty few get by him.

Mr. A. B. Humphreys, who has guided the destiny of athletic activities for a number of years at C. U., again has charge of the baseball team and the usual snap and vigor characteristic of his teams are being worked out beautifully.

Dan Kahn of Texas, by his untiring efforts, secured this diversified and formidable schedule. Fifteen different colleges, representing six different states, will be met by the C. U. team. Many of the best games have been scheduled for the local field since the business men proved they were back of the team by their wonderful contributions to the athletic fund. Among the best games to be played at Lebanon will be with Indiana University, Centre College of Kentucky, Howard College of Alabama, and Mercer of Georgia.

Baseball Schedule

March 26. Middle Tennessee Normal at Lebanon.
April 1. University of Indiana at Lebanon.
April 4 and 5. Carson and Newman College at Jefferson City, Tenn.
April 6 and 7. Lincoln Memorial University at Harrogate, Tenn.
April 8 and 9. Emory and Henry College at Emory, Va.
April 11 and 12. Milligan College at Milligan, Tenn.
April 13 and 14. Tusculum College at Greeneville, Tenn.
April 15. Maryville College at Maryville, Tenn.
April 16. Tennessee Polytechnic Institute at Cookeville, Tenn.
April 20. Mercer University at Lebanon.
April 30. Open.
May 4 and 5. Howard College at Lebanon.
May 10. Maryville College at Lebanon.
May 12. Center College at Lebanon.
May 16. Middle Tennessee Normal at Murfreesboro, Tenn.
May 20 and 21. Tennessee Polytechnic Institute at Lebanon.
May 25. Open.

The Middle Tennessee Normal Game

One enemy has been met and defeated. Middle Tennessee Normal, heretofore a thorn in the side of C. U., March 27 migrated to Lebanon and drank the dregs of defeat administered by our efficient nine. Six to five was the final count, and although it took twelve innings to do the work, the superiority of our boys was evidenced from the start. With McNabb in the box and McClure behind the bat, the umpire shouted "strike one," and thus started the baseball season of 1921. McNabb twirled throughout the entire twelve innings and McClure, despite a wallop on the shin, stayed as long. It was a good game throughout, and we hope the rest will prove as interesting and as favorable.

Richard W. Johnson, Athletic Director

With the desire to make Cumberland University prominent in athletics as well as in education, the authorities have secured as athletic director Sau-soo Soggeah (whose English name is Richard W. Johnson), a former Carlisle Indian athlete, who for two years was a member of the famous Carlisle football team, known as one of the most celebrated teams in America. Mr. Johnson was under the direct coaching of Glen S. Warner, the famous Carlisle coach, now coaching the University of Pittsburgh. Mr. Johnson as athletic director will specialize in developing Cumberland's football. He is a coach of very high standard, having coached for the last three years. He was coach of the champion Northwestern State College of Oklahoma team in 1917; developed a team at San Diego, Cal., in 1918 that won the championship of the Pacific Coast; in 1919 he coached the splendid Northwestern aggregation.

The Indian has the distinction of having played in the following important games while a player on the Carlisle team: Two games against each of Harvard and Pittsburgh, and one against each of the following: Cornell, Brown University, Alabama, Notre Dame, Syracuse, and a number of other important games. Mr. Johnson is a graduate of Carlisle University, Mary Gregory's Memorial College, the U. S. Indian School at Chilocco, Okla., and Tulsa University.

With a Carlisle man at the head of the coaching staff, and especially a man whose motto is "Concentration of the destructive elements on the decisive point," we may look with pride to the future.

Mr. A. B. Humphreys, Baseball Director

Mr. A. B. Humphreys, the leader of Lebanon's citizens, in backing C. U., and the man who devoted a large part of his time to the university as athletic director during the last five years deserves more thanks than we can give him in this article. He is a graduate of C. U., A.B., 1894; LL.B., 1895. During his college career he played on the local football teams and was captain of the baseball team. He then went to Jacksonville, Fla., where he practiced law and coached the University of Florida team five years. In 1906 he returned and engaged in the manufacturing business and coached the Castle Heights team for two years. Then C. U. secured him and has retained him ever since.

He is in a class by himself when it comes to putting out first-class ball clubs. Mr. Humphreys having been a big league player, is wise to the game, and all its lore and traditions. He has made it a habit to turn out winning baseball teams for C. U. and especially in developing teams that have taken old Vandy's measure. The athletic department of C. U. is fortunate indeed to have a man of Mr. Humphreys' caliber on its athletic staff. Mr. Humphreys has prospects of a very successful baseball team this season. He is certainly to be congratulated on his record and college spirit.

Organization

Y. M. C. A.

The Young Men's Christian Association of Cumberland University was first organized in 1856, the first college association ever formed, with Gen. A. P. Stewart as president. This association was firmly established as a leading factor in the university in 1881.

It is the purpose of the Young Men's Christian Association to strengthen the spiritual life of the university, to unite the students, to promote growth in Christian character and fellowship, to help young men make definite decisions. If a man is lost in the woods the most important question is, "Am I faced right? Am I moving straight ahead and not merely circling around and around?" It is necessary that a student have some end in view. You cannot read everything, or enjoy everything, or see everything. You may, if you choose, make the vain attempt, but you only circle around until the best years of your life are gone, and you are in a short span of time right back where you started. Every true-hearted young man wants to build up in himself a noble and worthy manhood. The Young Men's Christian Association stands for things that build worthy and noble manhood.

It should be the purpose of every young man in the university to be a member of this organization. There are questions that must be answered yes or no, not with the lips but with your life. There are the questions to which the answers are marked out not in chemistry or in mathematics or on the athletic fields, but men are brought face to face with God and taught to feel a sense of fellowship with Him who is the source of all strength. There is no better organization for a young man to unite with in college that will help him to solve these problems better than that of the Young Men's Christian Association.

The Y. W. C. A. was somewhat appalled at the first of the year 1920-1921 at finding only three old members back in school. However, these three started the ball to rolling with a tea, at which many members were enrolled. The cabinet vacancies were filled with new girls, and filled well. Despite these difficulties, the Y. W. C. A. has done well.

In the spring they have had cake and candy sales to raise money for Blue Ridge delegates. The ambition of every Y. W. girl is to go to Blue Ridge. She can go either on the "working force" for six weeks or she can be sent as a delegate by the association for ten days. Blue Ridge is a place of absolute happiness, for there one comes in contact with girls from all over the Southland, has every sort of advantage in athletics, intellectual and spiritual ways.

They endeavor to have a missionary program once a month, thus increasing interest in missions. And the last eight weeks they have had a mission study class in connection with Y. W.

In keeping with the time-worn custom of their predecessors in this institution these loyal Elks have held true to the old traditions of Elkdom. Their fraternal spirit bound them inseparably together. The herd often wandered into the social pastures of the Nashville lodge, where they grazed among the good fellowship and genuine hospitality characteristic of all Elkdom.

Oft in the revelry of the night when the pendulum reached that solemn hour, together they bowed their antlers in reverence to the cherished memory of bygone associations.

In school they were one in progress, pleasure and spirit; they depart into life one in memory, heart and understanding.

To All Whom It May Concern

BE it known that on or about Friday evening, January 27, 1921, according to previous announcement and arrangement, several members of the Philomathean Literary Society, who deemed it fitting and proper that on account of so great a number of students in the Law Department that there should be two societies to give each man the individual training that he or she should have in the art of public speaking, met at Caruthers Hall for the purpose of reviving the famous Caruthers Literary Society, that has won a national reputation for the orators that it has produced.

Mr. Walton was elected temporary chairman of the meeting, and after some discussion as to the necessary details, a committee was appointed to draft a constitution and by-laws, which were to be adopted at the next meeting. It was also agreed that the society should elect permanent officers at this meeting.

When the said persons met the next Friday evening, the constitution and by-laws were adopted with few amendments. Mr. Walton was elected president; Mr. Crossland, vice-president; Mr. Irvin, secretary; Mr. Stolnaker, treasurer; Mr. Hill, parliamentarian; Mr. Tolbert, argumentative critic; Mr. McClendon, literary critic; Mr. C. L. Hensley was elected sergeant-at-arms. No society ever had a more efficient set of officers. No society ever appreciated them more. You will see the roll on the next page.

A society was never represented with so great a per cent of individual talent. Among its orators we cannot but mention the names of Walton, Holloway, Tolbert, Irvin, McClendon, J. V. Gibson, Mason, and W. C. Goad. Among those who had great literary tastes and talent we must mention the names of Miss Packer, Tollet, Hill, Giles, Crossland, Edwards, Huser and Barry. Among the men of great legal ability the names of Pope, Pogue, J. R. Gibson, Henry, Carden, Christ, Phillips, Stearns, Gussman, Master-son, Baird, Ledbetter, Yumel, Goodpasture, Dr. Rieves, and the second "Tall Sycamore of the Wabash," Mr. C. W. Voorhies, and C. L. Hensley.

The Caruthers Literary Society had the reputation of never having a man on the program absent. It was the personification of enthusiasm and teamwork. There was not a man in it but came out an efficient public speaker, a deeper and broader reasoner, and a more graceful and polished wielder of the King's English.

Her male sextet, consisting of Messrs. Goad, Hill, Stolnaker, Edward, Huser and Rieves, will never be forgotten by her other members nor those who listened to their entrancing melodies. These men had a reputation far beyond the confines of Lebanon. Never a Sunday passed but that they were begged to sing at some of the churches of the city or those of some of the sister cities of Lebanon. Mr. Goad had won a national reputation as a soloist on a thousand Chautauqua platforms before he ever saw Cumberland University.

And the tones of Miss Chambers' violin, who can describe them? As we listened to the soothing notes produced by her, we saw life's May morning again. We looked backward through the long vistas of time to our yester years with their springs and summers and flowers. We saw again the drifting snow as it lay a white blanket over the world near our childhood home. We heard voices that have long been still. We heard bits of song that are never sung. We sat again beneath some distant evergreen, at close of day, as the moonbeams filled the world with silver light but whose rays could not penetrate the immediate vicinity of our sacred trysting place. It seemed that we could almost behold fairy hands beckoning us on to the unexplored scenes of Fields Elysian, and honest, we wished that she would never stop.

And the music from Miss Meier's piano had about the same effect. In fact, ladies and gentlemen, there never has been and never will be a society just exactly like ours nor as good as it was. Honest.

The Greek Denizens

It has been a long-standing custom at Cumberland University for all wandering Greeks to organize as a club to promote sociability and helpfulness and to keep together all the bonds of brotherhood. It was with this in mind that the odd Greeks, who at the time of organization numbered thirteen but gradually increased to twenty-one in number, organized soon after the opening of the fall term of school and adopted the name of "Greek Denizens." Many enjoyable and beneficial meetings and smokers have been had and each man will long remember his Greek cousins at Cumberland.

Psi Chi

HONORARY LEGAL FRATERNITY

MEMBERSHIP in this fraternity is conferred as a recognition of scholarly attainments of unusual merit, and only in such cases when the prospective member has attained some office or position of honor or distinction in college life.

Certain standards are prescribed which must be met, but membership is open to the entire student body and members are chosen from its numbers. None are eligible for membership in the fraternity until the last month of the junior course.

Beta Council of Psi Chi was not chartered until late in the year 1920 and no members were initiated until February of the present year. The foundations have been well laid, however, and it is hoped that in the future Psi Chi will be a real asset to Cumberland University, and will perhaps serve as an incentive to greater student activities and advanced scholarship.

Prefarce

Somewhere it is writ "There is nothing new under the sun," and be that as it may, we are absolutely certain that the author of this oft-quoted saying had never seen the Senior Law Class.

We believe that it was Chaucer, Story or some other noted aeronaut who said that some men are born funny (meaning "humorous"), some think they are funny, while others—poor creatures—die while yet in the state of delusion.

Unfortunately, or otherwise, we cannot claim any affiliation with the first class: the fact is, at that time we were of such a tender age that our father, despite his son's pleadings, positively refused to tell us whether or not we were destined to be "witty."

But back to the question of "What color to whitewash the fence." Be it resolved, that we have been duly elected editor of this most prosperous sheet. We were very much mortified on entering the duties of this office to find that the rules and regulations governing the staff and the joke editor strictly forbid the use of any originality. Hence it behooves us to seek material from outside sources. We take great pleasure in acknowledging valuable assistance from Dante, Irvin Cobb, Chancellor Kent and other famous and world-renowned musicians. Also from Sears-Roebuck, Ladies' Birthday Almanac and Robert W. Service's cookbook on "How to Raise Poultry."

Judge Beard: "Mr. Mason, what is dower?"

Mason: "Locking a woman up in a room for forty days."

Bertha Grissim: "I notice that Mrs. Harding is going to spend two thousand dollars a year on her wardrobe."

"Willie" William: "My, what does she want with such an expensive wardrobe? She must have a lot of fine clothes to put in it."

The literary societies of the Law Department are arousing no little interest at present. In a recent debate in the Caruthers Society the subject was, "Resolved, Napoleon was a greater man than Washington." Hensley, a defender of the negative, gave as his argument that he was unable to find a single speech in the Congressional Record uttered by Napoleon. Hess Crossland, of the affirmative, stated that Napoleon for ten years led the American League in hitting.

It was only last week that the Philomatheans debated the following subject: "Resolved, that the inaugural ball should be illuminated."

* * *

Prof. Baird: "Mr. Coffee, bring me the bottle of H₂S."

Coffee: "Here is some, professor, but it is spoiled."

Prof. Lemon asked his class in psychology to write on a slip of paper what they wished to get out of psychology.

One of the students wrote: "I wish to get out of it all."

"Chief" Johnson had a very close call the other night when he went to take a pill in the dark and by mistake took a bath instead. However, as we go to press Chief's condition is much improved. His physician says that should no complications arise he should be out in a week or so.

But, believe me, Steve, there's no such boy."

Judge Chambers: "Mr. Kane, if you were going with a rich young widow with the idea of matrimony, and some other fellow who was also paying a whole lot of attention to her and told some lies on you to her which might endanger your chances, what would that be grounds for?"

Kane: "That would be grounds for murder."

George Howard of the Literary Department says that Professor Belcher is his favorite teacher, as he never talks so loud during a class as to disturb his sleep.

WOULDN'T IT BE AWFUL:

If somebody laughed at these jokes.
If commencement never came.
If prohibition really prohibited.
If the truth ever leaked out.
If Texas should declare war on the United States.

If we all knew better.

Prof. Stockton (assigning an English lesson): "You will take Spencer's life Monday. Everybody be prepared."

Judge Chambers: "Mr. Redd, what comes after the jury reports that they find the defendant 'guilty'?"

Redd: "Guilty?"

Judge Chambers: "Oh, yes; juries frequently do that all over the country."

"When it Rains and Hales on the Ivy Green in the Cross-land Fields, it makes Peter's-Son Moody, and Goads Johnson to go over the Hill to the Turner and say, "Let's go down through the Good-Pasture and Presswood." M.A.S.O.N.

And all the boys kissed all the girls,

Two of our distinguished young attorneys had the exquisite pleasure of attending a reception recently given by Judge Walker in their honor. A delightful literary program was rendered. Bill Goad was scheduled for an address on the "Blessedness of Prohibition," but was unable to be present. Martin of Texas and Hess Crossland of Kentucky both gave interesting discourses on "The Blessedness of Liberty." A number of the other students were present.

The affair was purely formal, the entire affair being carried out uniformly. The color scheme of blue and brass added very much to the impressiveness of the occasion. Several clubs of the city were present to assist in the entertainment.

At the conclusion of the program Judge Walker thanked the young gentlemen for their presents, and congratulated them on their philanthropic spirit.

VanDyke had just finished telling a group what a fine dinner he had partaken of at the dormitory, whereupon Satterfield remarked that at his boarding house that day they had the best soup he had ever heard.

The following essay was recently found near the main college building, and bore the name of a well-known prep student:

"Henry VIII was a king of England, and the greatest widower as never was. He was borned at a placed called Anno Domino, and he had sixty-two wives. The first one he ordered to be executed, but she was beheaded. He revoked the second, and the third she died. And then he married Annie Bowling, the daughter of Tom Bowling. When he died he was succeeded on the throne by his Aunt Mary. Her full name was Mary, Queen of Scott, or the lay of the last minstrel.

Hinman (in moot court): "Do I understand you to say that this Cestui Que Trust was shot near the Corpus Delicti?"

Pope (opposing counsel): "We object to that; this witness has already stated that the bullet entered the Lis Pendens, ranged upward through the Jus Accrescendi, and lodged in the Vox Populi."

It is said on good authority that just after the beginning of the January term one of the new law students was caught matriculating. No action has been taken as yet.

Judge Chambers: "Mr. Murphy, why is a man always presumed to be unmarried?"

Murphy: "Because a man is supposed to be innocent until proved guilty."

ATTENTION!

These Rules Govern This Office

1. Gentlemen, you are requested to read these rules aloud for our benefit, as we are particularly fond of being often reminded of them.
2. Gentlemen, upon entering, leave the door wide open or apologize.
3. Those having no business should remain as long as possible; take a chair and lean against the wall, it will preserve the wall and may prevent its falling in upon us.
4. Talk loud, or whistle, especially when we are busily engaged; and if this does not have the desired effect, please sing.
5. Gentlemen, you are requested to smoke, especially during office hours; tobacco and cigars of the finest brands will be furnished.
6. If we are in busy conversation with anyone, gentlemen, you are requested not to wait until we are through, but join in, as we are particularly fond of speaking to half a dozen or more at a time.
7. Put your feet on the tables or lean against the desks; it will be of great assistance to those who are writing.
8. Persons having no business to transact will call often, or excuse themselves.
9. If you see anything in the office you would like as a souvenir, please help yourself; take it without asking—don't be bashful.
10. Profane language is at all times expected, especially if ladies are present.
11. Foolish questions are always in order.
12. Should the loan of money be desired, do not fail to ask for it, as we do not require it for business purposes, but merely for the purpose of lending.
13. We are much pleased to have you show interest enough in our private affairs to peruse our correspondence and other data that might be exhibited upon our desks.
14. Gentlemen, you are especially requested to come in thru the windows; it will save you time in entering our office, and then the doors might be locked.
15. Our "private stock" is always at your disposal; if we do not offer it to you, please remind us.

If you carefully observe these rules everyone will know that you are a GENTLEMAN(?).

Will of Senior Law Class of 1921

DRAWN BY W. E. G. AND J. F. M.

WE, the Senior Law Class of 1921 of Cumberland University, being of unsound mind but of a very disposing memory and knowing the certainty of "flunking" and the uncertainty of graduation, do hereby make and publish this our first will and testament, hereby revoking and invalidating all subsequent wills by us at any time made:

ITEM 1. We will and direct that all our debts, both just and unjust, including the expenses of our graduation, shall forever remain unpaid.

ITEM 2. It is our will, and we so desire, that all the hearts we have broken during our exile in this remote, foreign land, shall retain their dilapidated condition until the sun rises in the west.

ITEM 3. We desire to extend to the citizens of Lebanon no expressions of appreciation or gratitude for the inhospitalities and unkindnesses shown us during the past year, and we shall never forgive them for the many rumors and reports, whether false or true, which they have circulated about us.

ITEM 4. To the "Senior Law Class of 1922," to us commonly known as the juniors, we will, give, devise and bequeath our places of abode in Lebanon, and trust that they will fill them with as much trouble and inconvenience to their landladies as we did; also a few volumes of Story and 4th Kent, and very many lists of exam questions, but for which we would never have gotten our LL.B.'s; also our professional abilities which have enabled us to recover new exam questions thirty minutes before the examination; and last, but not least, one special list of twenty questions on Equity Jurisprudence, which we guarantee to "flunk" a U. S. Supreme Court justice.

ITEM 5. To the "Lit" students, who are inclined to punish peaceable men in the wee small hours of the night with weird music, we devise all our old buckets, basins, tin pans, ukes and tin horns, to perpetuate the "Bolshevik Club" with its motto, "Better disorder in the dormitory"; also the use of the university flivver for chasing over the city to fires at night.

ITEM 6. To the negro boys who sweep our rooms and make up our beds, we give and bequeath all our old sox, old clothes, empty white corn bottles, cigarette and cigar stubs, pipes and tobacco and old rubber raincoats, and request that these be used in a manner befitting their former owners.

ITEM 7. We devise the thirteen cents remaining in the class "wampum" to the university athletic fund to be used to buy new uniforms for the 1921 football team, and to erect a new grandstand.

ITEM 8. To the future residents of the dormitory we will, give and bequeath one "Lemon"; also our vast collection of art pictures, but same must never be removed from the places of honor they now occupy on the walls; also one first-class heating plant, which has long since passed the stages of usefulness, and an A-1 water system that is capable of furnishing only cold water, if any at all; also our eating supplies, which consist of two cars of hominy and ten tons of army bacon, well salted and guaranteed to last a lifetime, and a vast quantity of tough mule steak, on the hoof, which Mr. Gann will slaughter as demand warrants. Henry Ford's tin cows will continue to supply all the milk needed.

ITEM 9. All the rest and residue of our once valuable estate, of whatsoever kind and character the devil only knows, of which we may be possessed at our graduation but of which we know we are not lawfully seized, we give and bequeath to the future law students of Cumberland University, and we charge said legatees with the future "support of the mountain child."

ITEM 10. And now before appointing the executors of this will, and laying all foolishness and jokes aside, we desire to extend to Judges E. E. Beard and W. R. Chambers, professors of the Law Department, our sincere thanks and appreciation for their kind attentions to us and their untiring efforts in our behalf, and we wish to say that any fame that any of us might attain in after-life we shall owe to their perseverance.

And having full faith in the integrity and inability of the said "Senior Law Class of 1922," we appoint said class as the executors of this will and testament, but direct that they execute bond in triple the value of our estate, and request that they carry out the provisions of this will as leisurely and unsystematically as possible after our departure.

Witness our hand at Caruthers Hall, this June 1, 1921, at 10:30 o'clock, a. m.

SENIOR LAW CLASS OF 1921.

Signed, sealed, published and declared in our presence and at our demand, as and for the first will and testament of the Senior Law Class of 1921, and we, at the request of each other and in the presence of each other, but in the absence of the testator, have hereunto subscribed our names as attesting witnesses, at Memorial Hall, this June 1, 1921, at 10 o'clock, a. m.

Generations of Satisfied Customers

During our last Birthday Celebration in May a customer came into the store and said this to us:

“I came in to tell you that my family for four generations—my grandmother, my mother, myself and my children—have traded at Loveman’s. In all these years there has never been a single unpleasant occurrence, there has never been an error in a bill, and there has never been one discourteous word from anyone in the entire store. I think this is a record you should be proud of, and it gives me great pleasure to tell you of it.”
